A parte il fatto che in entrambi i casi non eri x100, il che già a prescindere ti frega se giochi per il set value (non certo il primo caso, il secondo però forse si)).

IMO, se gli oppo non hanno un cacchio, c'è poco da massimizzare. Al limite (ma parlo sempre a mano finita, quindi lascio il tempo che trovo) nella prima mano se l'oppo ha un AF alto potevi provare un c/r al turn. Solo questo mi sa

Re:nl100 come massimizzare i set

be anche 60bb sono buoni per set value basta avere lo stack 20 volte il raise mi sembra

Re:nl100 come massimizzare i set

Scritto da Raistlin - 2008/07/05 13:31

Mhmm, si ma fino ad un certo punto. Nella prima mano, lo stack effettivo è 60bb

Al flop ci sono 8.5bb (3.5+3.5+i bui) e lo stack effettivo è 56.5bb (il tuo)

Il rapporto stack/piatto è $56.5/8.5=6.5$ circa (cerca un mio vecchio post su NLHE professional). che è perfetto per la tua overpair al flop (ti committi + facilmente ed a te va bene).

Ma per set value preferisco avere 100bb, così a parità di azione ho $96.5/8.5=11.5$ come rapporto stack/piatto e, se sono in posizione, posso fare floating e rappresentare il set al turn, avendo + margine di manovra.

Se vuoi più tardi mi spiego meglio, così mi rendo conto che non significa un cazzo :p

Altro che set, son due full. E ti lamenti pure! :P

A mio avviso fare parola non serve a nulla con delle carte in tavola simili, è troppo improbabile che l'avversario leghi qualcosa e ti regali soldi. Sempre meglio puntare ed eventualmente far crescere il piatto :-)
